MISS CHICAGO TO FATHER PENN: "This is the way I protected my interests"

CHICAGO, Ill., June 11.

On a number of occasions Chicago citizens have manifested their displeasure at the disposition of Aldermen to give away valuable franchises, ut the most significant and thoroughly effective demonstration was made in December, 1898. Alderman Lyman had introduced an ordinance to rant a fifty-year franchise to the Yerkes street railway lines on ridiculous terms, under the Allen law, since repealed. Alderman Mangler, of the hen Twenty-first ward, had the temerity to make a speech in favor of the ordinance. At the next Council meeting, when the ordinance was up for onsideration, hundreds of Mangler's constituents, headed by a band, marched to the City Hall. They were denied admittance to the Council cham- er, but they kicked up a lively rumpus in the corridors and the Aldermen could distinctly hear their cries of "Lynch Mangler" Upon the desks of ach Alderman a small cardboard box was placed. These boxes, which were similar to those which confectioners use, contained miniature hangman's ooses. Although the City Council was organized to pass the ordinance, the receipt of the nooses and the visit of Mangler's constituency caused the Aldermen to recognize the error of their ways, and the measure was killed.

THIS IS THE WAY KANSAS CITY STOPS TRACTION GRABS

KANSAS CITY, Kansas, June 12.

Two months ago certain ordinances granting perpetual franchises to the street railway monopoly were introduced in Councils. The citizens received no compensation, either in the way of reduced fares or increased taxes. The majority of the Councils favored the ordinances. On the night the measures were up for final passage the citizens organized themselves into a vigilance committee and, with ropes, Winchesters and [illegible] gathered at the City Hall. THE ORDINANCES FAILED TO PASS.

And carefully turning up the bottoms of his overalls Uncle Jabez went chuckling up the pike to take his place in the great Bustleton tourney. For Bustleton, loveliest village of pastoral Montgomery county, is in the throes of a golf epidemic.

Only a month ago Bustleton was busy with its crops and knew no more about golf than it does of the differential calculus. Then one day appeared a couple of young men from summer board. The carried a big bunc sticks, and every da the fields and made sticks at little bal laughed at them fo seemed to be havin gradually little au watch them.

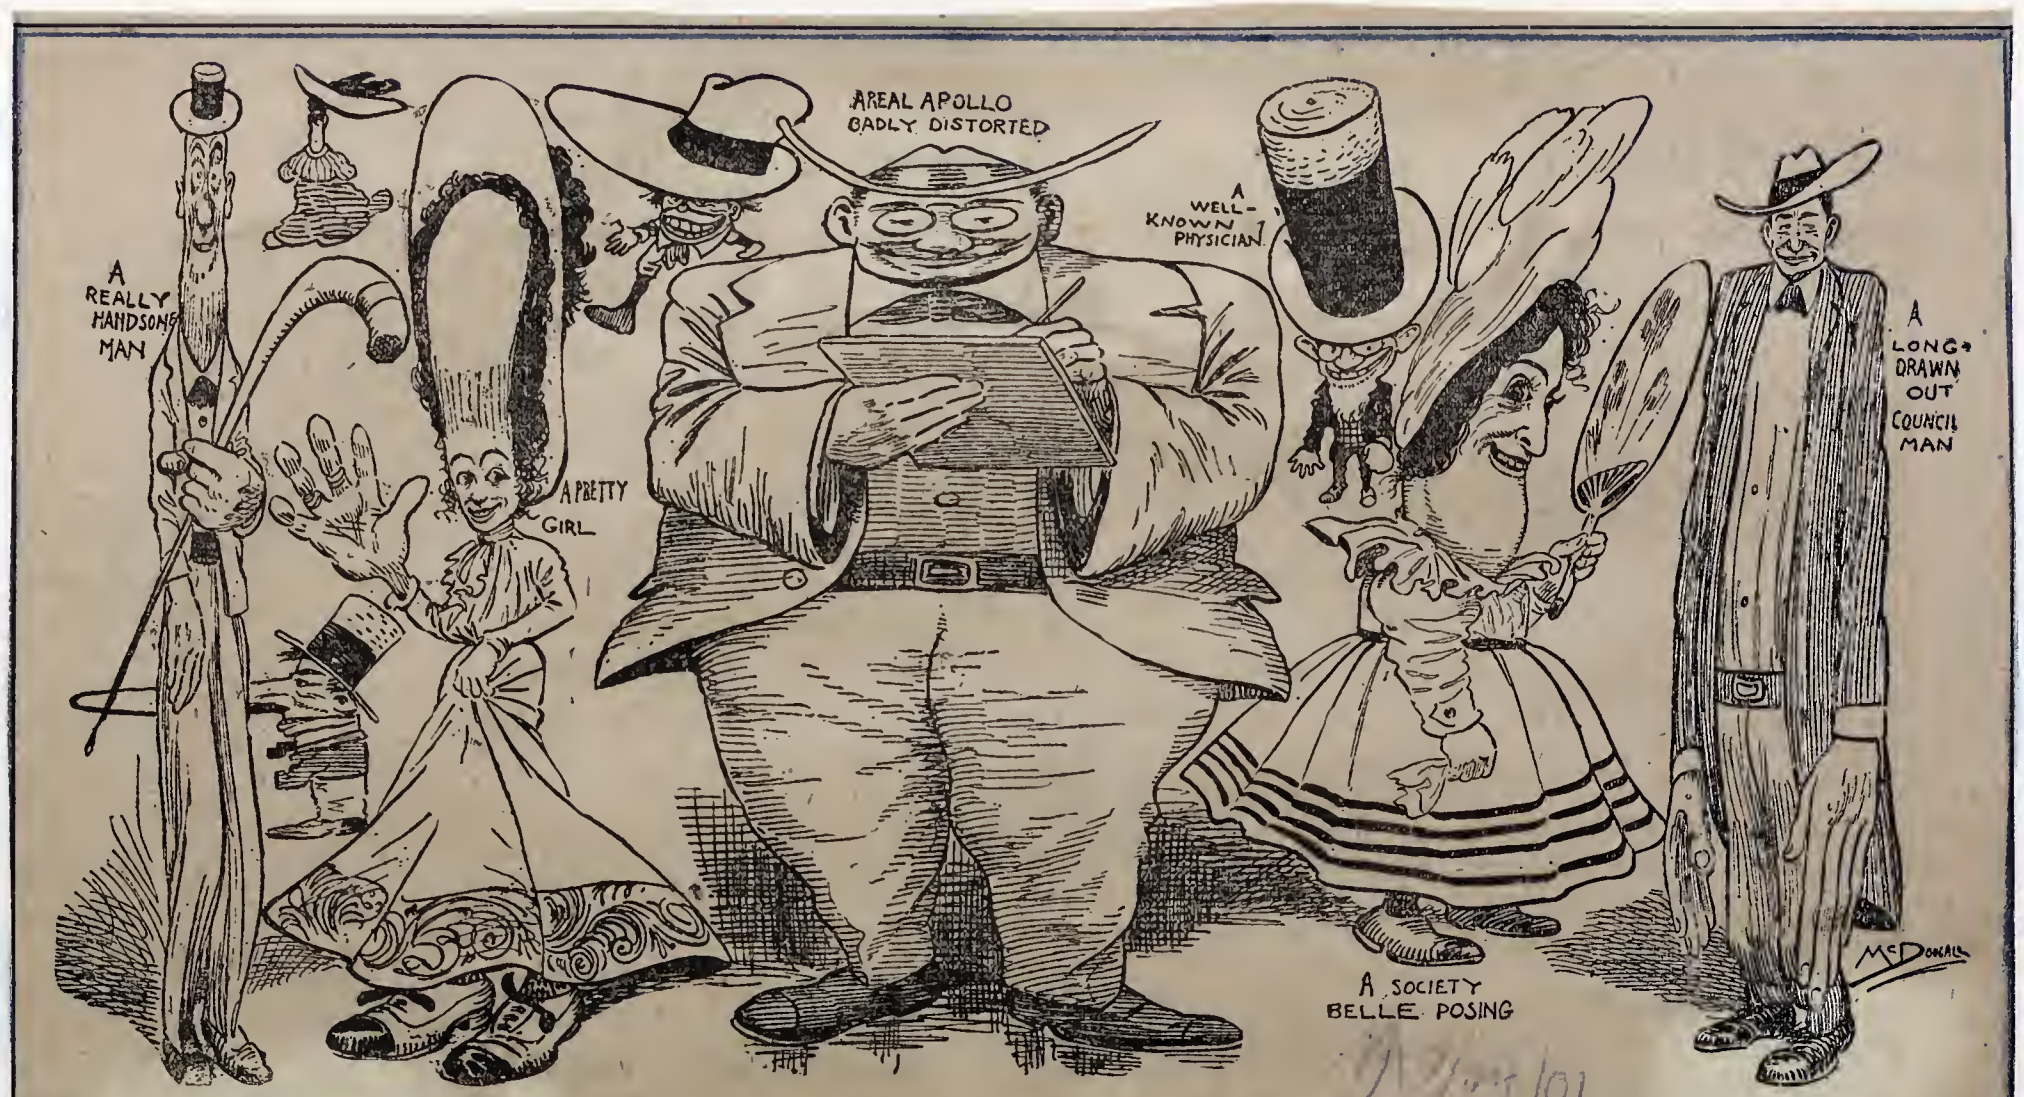
The farmers went to get the boys and thought they'd try their hands, too, and the wives and daughters went after the farmers, and they fell victims. It is a terrible thing, golf, when it becomes epidemic.

This was a month ago, and to-day it is estimated that of the total population of Bustleton, which is 353, not counting the pigs and chickens, 346 are playing golf. Eight clubs have been formed, including not only the farmers, but the aristocracy as well, doctors, lawyers, clergymen and their families, although these are in a set by themselves called "The Country Club."

The farmers meet at Jake Knorr's dry goods and grocery store and at Willett Boileau's notion emporium, where they whittle mashies into shape and polish themselves up on the dialect of the game.



WHAT McDOUGALL SAW IN THE MAGIC MIRRORS AT WILLOW GROVE

These are a few random samples of the innumerable queer caricatures seen in the "Mirror Maze" at Willow Grove. They are not even the oddest or funniest either, for the funniest thing is to see yourself distorted beyond all recognition, and at the same time catch the expressions on the faces of other beholders as they view you. When it comes their turn you may enjoy the mixture of amazement and indignation that is visible at the first view of their disfigurement.

There are more laughs to the square foot in this little building at present than can be gathered in seven States. It can be heard escaping through the cracks of the structure and leaking out into the atmosphere.

A "Yellow" Message From the White House

FATHER PENN—"When this great peril has passed I'll attend to you."

TO THE PUBLIC

CONCERNING The North American, and especially the proposed Sunday edition, I desire to state that being the sole owner of the stock of The North American Company, including the real estate, I therefore control its policy, and am alone responsible for its management.

My father, Mr. John Wanamaker, to whom some persons have erroneously attributed actual or constructive ownership or control of this paper and its policy, has no authority over its property or management whatever.

His disapproval of and opposition to the publication of Sunday newspapers generally, and particularly one owned by his son (which he has made every effort to purchase for the purpose of preventing a Sunday issue) constitutes a difference of moral opinion between us which I profoundly regret.

The responsibility for such publication, however, in the forum of conscience, as of law and fact, rests alone with the undersigned.

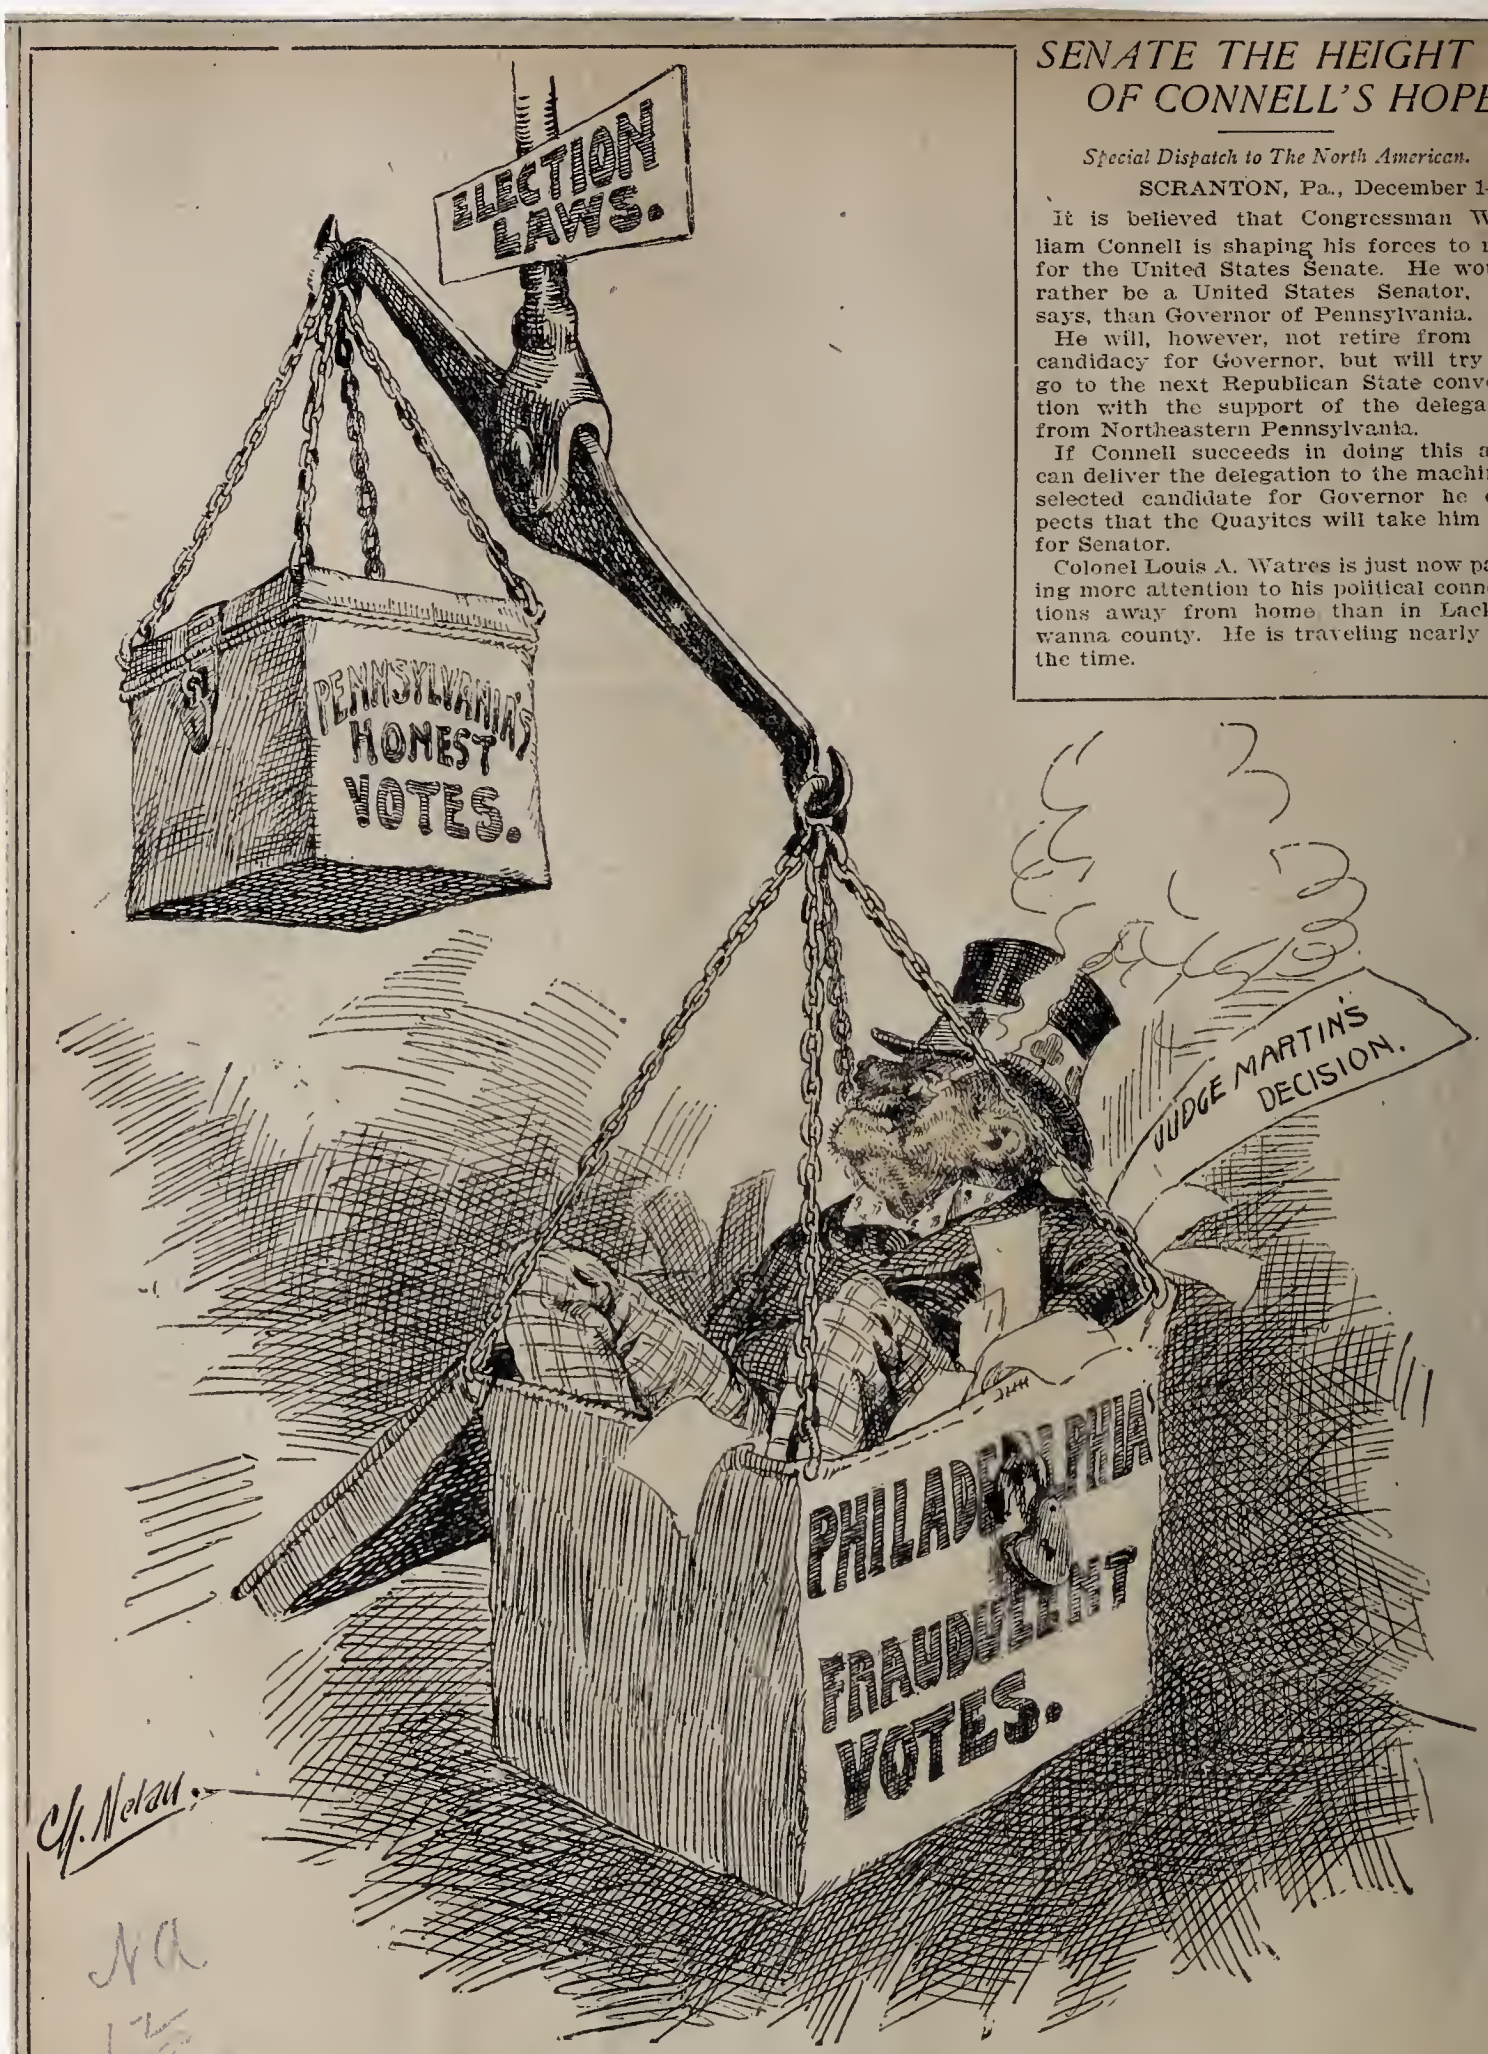
A BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION



SENATE THE HEIGHT OF CONNELL'S HOPES

Special Dispatch to The North American.

SCRANTON, Pa., December 14.

It is believed that Congressman William Connell is shaping his forces to run for the United States Senate. He would rather be a United States Senator, he says, than Governor of Pennsylvania.

He will, however, not retire from his candidacy for Governor, but will try to go to the next Republican State convention with the support of the delegates from Northeastern Pennsylvania.

If Connell succeeds in doing this and can deliver the delegation to the machine-selected candidate for Governor he expects that the Quayites will take him up for Senator.

Colonel Louis A. Watres is just now paying more attention to his political connections away from home than in Lackawanna county. He is traveling nearly all the time.

A CONDITION, NOT A THEORY

MOTHER QUAY—"He's making such a noise that I'll have to take him up."

ADVICE SERVED AT QUAYITE BANQUETS

Special Dispatch to The North American.

LANCASTER, October 26.—The Quay organization here has resorted to a rather novel method to arouse interest in what has been a very quiet campaign. Under instructions from Leader Griest, D. W. Grabill, chairman of the county committee, is giving banquets in various sections of the county at which the guests are the members of the county committee from the district where the feasts are held, with a few "influential Republicans" and officeholders.

The first of these unique gatherings was held last Monday evening at the Hotel Eagle, at Ephrata, and about thirty of the workers were present.

Mr. Grabill acted as toastmaster. The committeemen were given to understand that the usual big majority must be returned from their respective districts, and that every vote must be brought out, no matter by what means.

The workers were plainly told what was expected of them, and that unless they did their duty the machine would be lost.

On Tuesday evening another banquet was held at Columbia, and the same instructions were issued to the workers.

PENNSYLVANIA'S GOVERNMENT

ADDICKSITES NOW ANGRY AT HUNN

Special Dispatch to The North American.

WILMINGTON, Del., October 26.

Governor Hunn's voluntary interview on the matter of the disposal of Federal offices in Delaware has started political discussion anew. The confession of the Governor that President McKinley offered to put the selection of Federal offices in his hands, but that the tender was refused, has come as a shock to the Addicks party.

His explanation is that he did not want to be bothered with the matter, and he admits having told President Roosevelt that there was no one else than Congressman Ball to be considered in the State as the dispenser of Federal offices. The Governor has made himself stronger than ever with the Regular Republicans by his declaration that he did not want to become involved in the distribution of patronage from Washington.

It is taken that the Governor's statement is absolutely correct, and his courage in refusing to play a hand for the Addicks party shows that he is independent as between the Republican factions.

Matt Quay has come home from the Florida shore
As fresh as the flow'rs of May.
He's ready to sit in the game once more
And with cunning his cards to play.
Around his door there's a numerous mob
All after his aid pro tem.,
Some wanting advice and some a job,
Now what will he do with them?

John Elkin comes in a state of doubt
And says with a dismal groan:
"If I haven't your help, they'll knock me out,
And I'll never succeed Bill Stone."
But the Old Man knows that Elkin's grip
Is wholly relaxed and gone;
Someone else must get the governorship,
Then what will he say to John.

Bill Stone is there with a downcast air
Betokening deep distress
One little matter he wants to square.
'Tis that of his own "P. S."
Right well is Matt aware that this
Is a scandal too big to kill,
And that men like Stone he never would miss.
So what will he say to Bill?

May not be too bad to mend.
Now Quay has learned what Durham should know
If ignorance were not bliss,
And that fix-ups nowadays do not go,
So what will he say to "Is?"

And there's Joe Brown from Pittsburg town,
Who carries a string of deals,
When he isn't turning the Old Man down
He's whimpering at his heels.
Such visitors kindle Matthew's ire.
He's sick of their tales of woe,
And to turn 'em down is his heart's desire.
Then what will he say to Joe?

Yes, what will he say to Tom and Dick
And Harry and all the rest?
Who prowl around to pray and to kick,
A genuine plague and pest?
If he spoke his mind out plump and flat
He'd sit on them right away,
But diplomacy rules with men like Matt,
So—what will the Old Man say?

A DAY WITH SENATOR QUAY.
